How to Check the Transfer Fraud. To the Editor of THE EVENING STAR: Referring to the subject of preventing the record of fraudulent transfers of real estate in the District of Columbia, permit me to suggest a very simple and effectual check to such attempts of frauds. The assessor of the District having a book of charts of real estate in the District, compiled by wards or sections, has, we say, the name of the rightful owner of each Staten Island, N. Y., and Miss Caroline de B. order to start aright this entry of owners with a high fraise of lace. The front of the grantor and description of property as given in was trimmed in a waistcoat effect, with said deed, with the name, location, size and boundaries of property conveyed, as shown in his book of charts, and also examine that deed with a rich passementerie of pearls. The sides is properly executed and acknowledged, (though simply comparison of name of owner with name of grantor in deed, and examination all purpose in order to save assessor's time Upon a satisfactory examination, the assessor to record the deed now goes to the office of the dressed uniformly in demi-train recorder of deeds, who in turn should not accept any deed for record unless it has first been passed upon and stamped by the assessor. In this way it would be impossible for a fraudulent transfer to pass on record and the assessor, instead of depending upon the recorder for periodical transcript of fee deeds > material for this in his own office, where it The proposed change might cause a little inconvenience to grantees of real property in that they would be required first to submit and stamp, and then carry it to the recorder for record, but the benefit to the owner and also to the assessor would more than compensate for such slight trouble.
